The US Department of Housing and Urban Development's Comprehensive Housing Affordability Strategy (CHAS) data is a special tabulation of Census 2000 data not largely available through standard Census products. HUD analysis of the rounding rules applied to all CHAS data shows that tables with more cells (such as a large table at the Census Tract geography) when aggregated to the national level results in a national deflation of total population. However, for lower levels of geography, such as individual places and counties, sometimes it inflates or deflates. For this reason, HUD suggests that users work with the tables at the highest level of geography possible for their particular project. HUD also suggests that users be careful when comparing differences with the 1990 Census data and when comparing the data across tables or with the summary file (SF) 3 standard tabulation data. These data will not add up to the data available via the Census Bureau's SF3 tables due to special tabulation rounding rules that were not used for SF3. Data is reported by household. For more information, see HUD's CHAS 2000 Data webpage at <http://www.huduser.org/datasets/cp.html>.
